The works of one nineteenth century man pretty well defined the origin, growth, and importance of Mauch Chunk on a national scale. Josiah White, “Prince of Pioneers”, created an industrial outpost in a foreboding wilderness – a wilderness containing a stone on which was founded the transportation, the industry, and the commerce of the country.

Josiah White was a key Pennsylvania industrialist who began early factory centered mill production in 1808 in water powered iron works near Philadelphia, along with his partner, Erskine Hazard when they quickly found their first mill at the Falls of the Schuylkill to be much too small. Subsequently, soon after they were forced to build a much more elaborate large mill nearby to refine pig iron and produce cast iron artifacts or roll wrought bar iron goods, including nails and wire. The pair were
